To sum up Bob's life, it is like a battered old book, placed high on a shelf covered in dust. As we sit turning the tattered pages it all just makes us smile. A character from start to finish. A will and determination that carried through his 87 years. Nothing was finer than a hot coffee and someone to swap tales with. If he announced his next big project, just stand back, and let the chips fall. A love of life, bigger than the big blue sky. A laugh that echoed in every room. He was humble and kind. He taught through example and his expectations were lined with kindness. His quick wit and easy smile carried through to his final days.

It is with great sadness we turn the final page of the old book and place it back, high on the shelf.
